Every member of and those seeking membership in SWAFS shall refrain from exercising professional or personal conduct adverse to the best interests and purpose of the Association. “Criminalistics is an occupation that has all the responsibility of medicine, the intricacy of the law, and the universality of science. Inasmuch as it carries higher penalties for error than other professions, it is not a matter to take lightly, nor to trust to luck...”

Paul L. Kirk, Ph.D.

1902-1970

The word ‘Forensic’ is defined in the Academic Press Dictionary of Science and Technology as “of or relating to courts of law or legal proceedings...”

Existence of the forensic science profession is undeniably linked to the justice system. Jury decisions are based in part on the opinions presented to them by forensic “experts.” Trial verdicts are reached from these jury decisions. Forensic scientists therefore have an obligation to provide opinions and facts to a court of law that are truthful, honorable, and of sound judgment. Conclusions and opinions must not be compromised, misrepresented, embellished nor exaggerated. Testimonial negligence will result in the utmost crime against humanity. No person shall...” be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law” (Fifth Amendment as referenced by Kusmack).

Preparation for civil and/or criminal law matters must be given great attention and should commence early on during one’s career. Previous sections have discussed ideals that empower forensic scientists in their abilities to successfully execute the duties of their job. The work product of the forensic scientist is culminated in the conclusions stated in their report and during testimony.

“Always tell the truth; that way you never have to remember what you said.” Harry S. Truman

Communication pertaining to forensic legal matters, nevertheless, must be succinct yet thorough and understandable.

The obligations of forensic testimony are almost infinite. The SWAFS Code of Professional Conduct will not ensure that its members are respectful, honest, fair, and responsible, but it will ensure that persons not upholding their responsibility to the profession are aware of the consequences of their negligent actions.
